2 BEFORE THE HONORABLE DANIEL A. OTTOLIA

3 THE COURT: Good morning. Welcome to Department 4.
4 The Court will now call the case of Ahn versus 5 Hestrin, RIC 1607135. If I could please have appearances for 6 the record.

7 MR. LARSON: Good morning, your Honor. Stephen
8 Larson and Steven Haskins on behalf of the plaintiffs.

9 MS. SHORT: Catherine Short on behalf of the 10 plaintiffs.

11 MS. KITTERMAN: Karen Kitterman on behalf of the 12 plaintiffs.

13 MS. CATLETT: Good morning, your Honor. Kelli
14 Catlett, Deputy District Attorney, on behalf of Michael 15 Hestrin, defendant.

16 MS. FITZPATRICK: Ivy Fitzpatrick, Deputy District
17 Attorney, on behalf of defendant, Michael Hestrin.

18 MS. LYNCH: Good morning. Katherine Lynch on behalf 19 of the intervenors.

20 MS. WONG: Judy Wong on behalf of the intervenors.

21 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

22 Now, I have been handed few cards here from counsel.
23 I would ask that only one attorney from the plaintiffs' side 24 speak and one attorney from the District Attorney's office and 25 one attorney for the State of California.

26 The Court does understand that this is a case of 27 wide interest and deals with issues of life and death. So 28 this is a serious matter. The Court has read all the briefs.

1 The Court has read all the declarations. I would ask members 2 of the audience to please refrain from saying anything or 3 disrupting the proceedings.

4 All right. The matters before the Court this 5 morning are a demurrer to the complaint of plaintiff by the -- 6 by Mr. Hestrin and also the hearing on the injunction this 7 morning. So I thought we'd start with the demurrer first.

8 MS. FITZPATRICK: Your Honor, good morning. Ivy
9 Fitzpatrick on behalf of the District Attorney.

10 I want to say and start off by, you know, while the 11 defendant, the District Attorney, understands and appreciates 12 the obviously strong opinions on this law from the plaintiffs' 13 side, and particularly given their chosen occupations, some of 14 the people they treat, the fact remains that they haven't 15 presented this Court with a justiciable controversy. There is 16 no standing.

17 They're asking this Court to take an extraordinary 18 step of enjoining a public official, the District Attorney of 19 Riverside County, from following presumptively a legislatively
20 enacted law. But they have no standing, no actual patient, no
21 actual doctor, who is going to prescribe the medication, no
22 actual justiciable controversy before this Court, no standing, 23 no ripeness.

24 Essentially they're asking this Court to take that 25 extraordinary step based on a hypothetical state of facts and 26 a disagreement with the law. And while I just stated that we 27 understand that they disagree with the law, there was a number 28 of legislative hearings on this and then other lawsuits prior

1 to this one and before the lawsuit [sic] was enacted, and 2 there has been great controversy on the law. We understand 3 that.

4 However, the Court here is in the position of 5 deciding the case, not deciding the merits of arguments on one 6 side of an issue or not. And the problem here is that it's 7 inescapable. We can't get around the fact that there's no 8 standing and no ripeness, and courts can't issue advisory 9 opinions, and that is exactly what they're asking this Court 10 to do.

11 One could imagine a ripe case, one where there was 12 standing, a patient who has a particular terminal illness, a 13 particular doctor who is willing to prescribe medication under 14 the Act; and a family member perhaps who doesn't agree with 15 the terminally ill patient's decision to end their life, while 16 perhaps another doctor in the same practice maybe or in the 17 same hospital that knows the situation that doesn't agree with 18 that doctor's chosen action with that patient. So we can 19 imagine situations where there could be standing, there could 20 be ripeness, but there's just not here. This is an 21 association, doctors who treat terminally ill patients, no 22 doubt. And the situation for those terminally ill patients is 23 dire and horrible, and all of us are empathetic to their 24 situation.

25 Again, this Court is in the situation of having to 26 decide a case where the issues are ripe enough for this Court 27 to actually make a decision.

28 I don't want to read my entire brief, but I want to

1 point out a few cases for the Court. And I think -- when I
2 was looking it over again, I was struck by some of the 3 language in the cases and how applicable it is to this 4 particular case.

5 On page 6 of the People's opposition to the 6 preliminary injunction -- I believe it's the same page for the 7 demurrer -- the People laid out some of the law on ripeness
8 and standing, which all of us learned in our first year of law 9 school, harkening back. And the proper -- the quote is from 10 the City of Santa Monica versus Stewart case, and it talks
11 about ripeness. It says, "The proper role of the judiciary 12 does not extend to the resolution of abstract differences of 13 opinion."

14 We clearly have a difference of opinion on a very 15 serious issue here.

16 "And it prevents the judicial consideration of 17 lawsuits that seek only to obtain general guidance rather than 18 to resolve specific legal disputes."

19 And what the two-prong test the Court considers is 20 whether the dispute is sufficiently concrete so that the 21 relief requested is appropriate and whether the parties will 22 suffer hardship if judicial consideration is withheld.

23 Which party is going to actually suffer the 24 hardship? If we had a patient here or a family member or an 25 actual case, not a hypothetical situation, one could possibly 26 see that. But what we're dealing with, grappling with, what 27 is this hypothetical situation that the plaintiffs are -- the 28 plaintiffs are telling this Court there are patients who might

1 do this. There are patients who might fall into this 2 category. There might be people who disagree with it. There
3 might be an inappropriate use of the Act, but where? Where?
4 Where is that actual situation that's been brought to this 5 Court so the Court can make an informed decision on concrete 6 facts, which is what the Court's are designed to do in this 7 country. They're not designed to meddle into differences of 8 opinion that are laid out and argued in the legislative arena.
9 The Court is supposed to be deciding facts based on the law
10 and then creating an actual judgment for parties with actual 11 interests.

12 THE COURT: Ms. Fitzpatrick, I would agree that 13 there is an issue of public interest.

14 MS. FITZPATRICK: Absolutely. Like we said from the 15 very beginning, absolutely.

16 THE COURT: Doesn't that go into the equation of 17 ripeness?

18 MS. FITZPATRICK: No, because it goes into the 19 equation of standing and ripeness. And there's a case, and I
20 was just about to get to that, the Boorstein versus CBS
21 Interactive case. It talks about as a general principle, 22 okay, to have standing, a party must be beneficially
23 interested in the controversy. That is, here she must have 24 some special interest to be served or some particular right to 25 be preserved or protected over and above the interest held in 26 common with the public at large.

27 So there can be a public interest, but the people
28 that are bringing the lawsuit, the people who are asking this

1 Court to act, have to have something more than that. I think
2 the public at large in the state of California is interested 3 in this issue. It's an important issue. But what is the 4 particular right? What is the particular decision that this 5 Court is being asked to make? What particular interest do 6 they have above and beyond a member of the public? And which 7 harm, particular harm, are they asking this Court to rectify
8 or prevent? And that is really the question.

9 I understand the plaintiffs are going to argue
10 associational standing. But, again, with the associational 11 standing, you have to have at least one member, not simply -- 12 and one patient where this is going to be actually affected.

13 Again, I'm not -- I'm not trying to dictate how the 14 plaintiffs bring their lawsuits, but in this particular 15 instance, there is simply not a justiciable controversy for 16 this Court, and there is not associational standing. For 17 associational standing, there has to be -- one of the members
18 has to be suffering immediate or threatened injury, and as a 19 result of the challenged action of the sort that would make it 20 justiciable had the members themselves brought suit. We 21 simply don't have this here.

22 So with no standing and no ripeness, there's no
23 controversy for this Court to settle, and the demurrer has to 24 be sustained.

25 I would be happy to take the Court's questions.

26 THE COURT: All right. The Court does not have any 27 questions at this time.

28 Let me hear from Mr. Larson.

1 MR. LARSON: Thank you, your Honor. Your Honor, I 2 also want to begin with the recognition that this is a very 3 challenging case. I understand there are very strong opinions
4 on both sides. Counsel for the plaintiffs in this case have 5 an extraordinary amount of empathy and concern for the 6 countervailing positions. In fact, part of that controversy, 7 your Honor, part of that interest, as you pointed out, goes to 8 the issue of ripeness. I think counsel is conflating ripeness 9 and standing, and they're two separate justiciable concepts.
10 The ripeness is satisfied by the clear public interest. There 11 is no question that this case is ripe.

12 This is not a situation where the legislature may 13 pass something or that a bill may be enacted or something in 14 the future. This is something which has been enacted. We're 15 now getting death certificates. Real people are dying. Real 16 doctors are being confronted with this decision. It is 17 clearly ripe.

18 On the standing issue, your Honor, I think we set 19 forth clearly in our briefs -- I'm not going to repeat all of 20 the law or the argument there -- two separate bases for 21 standing. One is third-party standing and the other is the 22 direct standing of the doctors involved.

23 Now, counsel suggests that I don't have a particular 24 doctor who would prescribe the medication. No, I'm not.
25 Those kinds of doctors are probably not going to be 26 challenging this particular Act. It is the doctors who are 27 opposed for the reasons set forth in the brief to doing so 28 that are being subjected essentially to the regulations of

1 this Act, being undermined by the regulations of this Act,
2 that are being directly challenged by it.

3 Third-party standing in California, the law is quite 4 liberal. It's not the standing law that we learned in law
5 school when we were being taught the federal standing. The 6 Oregon case, that was the fatal flaw there. The District 7 Court judge in Oregon, faced with a very similar statute, had 8 no problem finding this to be a massive constitutional 9 violation. It went to the Ninth Circuit, that applied the 10 federal standing requirements.

11 THE COURT: You're referring to Lee vs. Oregon?

12 MR. LARSON: Oh, yes, I'm referring to the Lee case,
13 your Honor, which we're going to refer to a lot at the hearing
14 this morning, because I do believe the District Court judge
15 got it right up there. And I'm not even saying the Ninth
16 Circuit got it wrong. They were applying --

17 THE COURT: And that case was vacated and remanded,
18 Mr. Larson.

19 MR. LARSON: I'm sorry?

20 THE COURT: That case was vacated and remanded.

21 MR. LARSON: Was vacated and remanded, and it was 22 vacated on the standing issue. And it was applying the 23 federal standing requirements, not under California law.

24 Under California law, as this Court knows, for 25 third-party standing, we must show two elements, that the 26 plaintiffs's relationship with the third party is sufficiently 27 close to make them as effective a proponent of the right as 28 the acts of third parties. In this case, your Honor, there is

1 no closer relationship than the doctor and patient. And I
2 would submit that's particularly close at end of life or in 3 the types of situations we have here. I cannot imagine any 4 closer relationship. I would like to think attorney-client
5 relationships are close. They're nothing compared with that 6 doctor-patient. It even really borders on that marital 7 relationship in certain circumstances.

8 The second element, of course, is where the party 9 has an obstacle to bringing the suit. The obstacle, your 10 Honor, in these cases is self-evident. The doctors speak for 11 the patients. The doctors are in the best position to 12 represent those interests. I submit that the Lungren case and 13 the Wood case, which are both cited in our briefs, speak to 14 this.

15 In addition to the third-party standing, though,
16 your Honor, as I indicated a moment ago, you have the direct 17 standing of the doctors themselves. That medical relationship
18 has become completely undermined here for the various reasons 19 set forth in our brief.

20 Your Honor, unless the Court has any other 21 questions, I think both ripeness and standing are clear here, 22 and we need to get on the merits of this motion for 23 preliminary injunction.

24 THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Mr. Larson.

25 The Court would like to issue its ruling with 26 respect to the demurrer.

27 In the demurrer, the District Attorney argues that 28 the Court has no power to order injunctive relief against it

1 because of the separation of powers, and points to CCP section 2 526(b) (4) and Civil Code section 3423, which forbids an 3 injunction to prevent execution of a public statute by an 4 officer of the law for the public benefit.

5 The DA argues, correctly, that only the electorate
6 can remove the District Attorney from his job. But plaintiffs 7 are also correct that this Court has the authority to enjoin
8 enforcement of unconstitutional laws. The cases and 9 authorities cited by the District Attorney refer to the 10 Court's lack of authority to prevent enforcement of valid and 11 constitutional laws only. So the Court finds that this Court 12 has full authority to enjoin the execution of an 13 unconstitutional enactment.

14 With respect to the issue of standing and ripeness,
15 the District Attorney has argued this morning that there is no
16 justiciable controversy based on the standing or ripeness 17 because plaintiffs do not allege that they are treating an 18 actual patient who has sought relief under the Act. A 19 justiciable controversy refers to an actual controversy and it 20 involves ripeness and standing. Standing depends on whether 21 there is a "real interest in the ultimate adjudication because 22 plaintiff has neither suffered nor is about to suffer any 23 injury of sufficient magnitude." Citing the Schmier versus 24 Superior Court case, 78 Cal.App.4th 703, a 2000 case.

25 Ripeness requires plaintiff to show that, one, a 26 dispute is sufficiently concrete so that relief is available 27 and, two, the parties will suffer hardship if judicial 28 consideration is withheld. City of Santa Monica versus

1 Stewart, 126 Cal.App.4th 43, a 2005 case.

2 Ripeness is a matter of discretion and will not 3 prevent the Court from resolving concrete disputes if 4 deferring a decision leads to lingering uncertainty, when 5 there is widespread public interest in the answer to a 6 particular legal question. Citing the Pacific Legal 7 Foundation versus California Coastal Commission case,
8 33 Cal.3d 158, a 1982 case.

9 As the opposition correctly points out, assisted 10 suicide is a widespread public interest, and plaintiffs have 11 patients who fall under the Act's definition of a terminal 12 disease. So the applicability of the Act is not merely 13 hypothetical, as the District Attorney argues.

14 As to standing, where a constitutional challenge is 15 involved, such challenges are allowed where the relationship 16 of plaintiff with a third party is so close that the litigant 17 is fully, or very nearly, as effective a proponent of the 18 right and, two, the third parties have obstacles bringing suit
19 themselves. Also citing city of Santa Monica versus Stewart
20 case.

21 Therefore, the Court will overrule the demurrer on 22 these grounds and find there is a justiciable controversy
23 because the plaintiffs have standing and the matter is ripe.

24 The Act is now in effect regarding a subject of 25 public interest. The plaintiffs are physicians whose actions
26 are not only covered under the Act, but who have a close 27 enough relationship to their patients to bring them within the 28 ambit of the Act.

1 Therefore, the demurrer is overruled, and the 2 defendant is to answer within 30 days.

3 All right. Next, we go to the injunction. I think 4 the best way to handle this is to let the Court read its 5 decision with respect to the injunction, and then I'll let the 6 parties state what you want for the record.

7 All right. This motion for a preliminary injunction
8 was brought by plaintiffs to prevent enforcement of the End of 9 Life Option Act by the District Attorney of Riverside County.
10 The Attorney General, State of California, has also filed a 11 complaint in intervention and opposes the preliminary 12 injunction. An amicus brief has been filed by Compassion &
13 Choices, also opposing the motion, and another amicus brief
14 has also been filed by Mr. David S. Killoran.

15 Plaintiffs allege that the Act is unconstitutional 16 because it denies equal protection to those defined as having 17 a terminal disease because those with such a terminal illness
18 are protected by other California -- I'm sorry, because those 19 without such a terminal illness are protected by other 20 California laws, which generally prohibit and criminalize 21 assisted suicide, such as Penal Code 401 and Welfare and 22 Institutions Code section 5150.

23 Plaintiffs also argue that the Act has no standards 24 for the physician to follow, and the physicians are often in 25 error regarding estimating the timing of the end of life based 26 on disease.

27 Plaintiffs also argue that the Act violates due 28 process because the Act does not provide for a fundamental

1 safeguard before the individual is deprived of life. They 2 argue that the Act is unconstitutionally vague because it
3 fails to specify whether the six-month prognosis assumes there
4 will or will not be medical interventions to preserve life.
5 Therefore, the definition is susceptible to encompassing 6 chronic illnesses such as diabetes or kidney disease.

7 The plaintiffs also allege that the Act was 8 improperly adopted in an extraordinary session of the 9 legislature. The Act was improperly adopted because an 10 extraordinary session is limited to the subject for which the 11 session was commenced, and here it was commenced to consider 12 funding health care and promoting the health of Californians.

13 When the proponents of the Act failed to obtain 14 passage by the legislature of an assisted suicide law, and 15 California voters rejected an initiative for assisted suicide, 16 plaintiffs allege the extraordinary session was used to avoid 17 the debate and consideration of the assisted suicide issue 18 which would have occurred at a regular session of the 19 legislature.

20 The complaint states three causes of action for 21 violation of California Constitution, Article I, section 7, 22 equal protection, violation of California Constitution,
23 Article I, section 7, due process, and violation of California
24 Constitution Article IV, section 3.

25 All right. In determining whether or not to issue
26 an injunction, the Court must evaluate the reasonable 27 probability or likelihood that plaintiff will prevail, and the 28 Court must balance the harms to the parties if the injunction

1 issues. There is no rule as to the relative weight of the two 2 factors. A greater showing of one factor could reduce the 3 showing on the other factor.

4 Health and Safety Code section 443, et seq., the End
5 of Life Option Act, which we shall refer to as the "Act" from 6 here on out, was added at an extraordinary session of the 7 California Legislature and became effective on June 9, 2016.
8 The Act decriminalizes assisted suicide in situations where a 9 doctor has determined that a patient has a terminal disease 10 within reasonable medical judgment.

11 "Terminal disease" is defined under the statute as 12 "an incurable and irreversible disease that has been medically 13 confirmed and will, within reasonable medical judgment, result 14 in death within six months." Health and Safety Code section 15 443.1, subdivision (q).

16 The State of California requests judicial notice of 17 the legislative history of the Act, and the request is granted
18 pursuant to Evidence Code section 452 and 453.

19 Plaintiffs' request for judicial notice is denied,
20 as newspaper articles and press releases are not proper 21 subjects for judicial notice.

22 With respect to standing and ripeness, the Court has 23 already pronounced on that with respect to the demurrer, so 24 I'm not going to go over those arguments.

25 Let's look at first with respect to the issue of was 26 the Act properly adopted at an extraordinary session. Article 27 I, section 3, of the California Constitution provides that "On 28 extraordinary occasions, the governor by proclamation may

1 cause the legislature to assemble in special session and, if 2 so assembled, has power to legislate only on subjects
3 specified in the proclamation."

4 Governor Brown authorized the session at issue here
5 by proclamation, which stated the session concerned healthcare 6 coverage under Medi-Cal and generally to "improve the 7 efficiency and efficacy of the healthcare system, reduce the 8 costs of providing healthcare services, and improve the health
9 of Californians."

10 The scope of an extraordinary session has been 11 broadly interpreted. The Court would cite the Sturgeon versus 12 County of Los Angeles case, 191 Cal.App.4th 344, a 2010 case.
13 When the governor has submitted a subject to the legislature, 14 the designation of that subject opens for legislative 15 consideration matters relating to, germane to, and having a 16 natural connection with the subject proper. Citing the Martin 17 versus Riley case, 20 Cal.2d 28, a 1942 case.

18 Even though improving the health of Californians 19 might seem far removed from assisted suicide, it is 20 sufficiently related to health care and the efficiency and 21 efficacy of the healthcare system for the Court to consider 22 the Act to be within the scope of the authorization for the 23 session.

24 Here, the governor's proclamation concerning the 25 health of Californians and the subject is sufficiently broad 26 to include the legislation concerning assisted suicide. So 27 the Court concludes that the Act was properly adopted.

28 The next issue the Court looks at is whether equal

1 protection rights have been violated under the Act. Under 2 equal protection analysis, to succeed, a plaintiff must show 3 that the state has adopted a classification that affects two 4 or more similarly situated groups in an unequal manner. In re
5 Brian J., 150 Cal.App.4th 97, a 2007 case.

6 The issue is whether they are similarly situated for 7 purposes of the law and not for all purposes. Once the 8 determination is made that similarly situated groups are 9 treated differently, then the Court must determine which level 10 of analysis to apply.

11 The Court concludes that the rational basis test
12 applies to the analysis of the Act because the Act neither 13 infringes upon a fundamental right nor involves a suspect 14 classification and because it constitutes economic and social 15 welfare legislation.

16 The rational basis test has been met because the 17 legislature has a legitimate objective in giving its citizens
18 an option to end their life in the event of a terminal
19 disease, and the Act provides a reasonable method of achieving 20 that objective.

21 Next, the Court would look at whether due process
22 has been violated by the Act. Plaintiffs also argue due 23 process rights are violated by the Act. The federal due 24 process clause imposes constraints on governmental decisions
25 that deprive individuals of liberty or property interests, 26 within the meaning of the due process clause of the Fifth and 27 Fourteenth Amendments. Mathews versus Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 28 a 1976 case.

1 The California Constitution also has due process
2 safeguards, which are stated in Article I, section 7. Due
3 process has been described as "fundamental fairness."

4 Lassiter versus Department of Social Services of Durham
5 County, North Carolina, 452 U.S. 18; 1981.

6 Due process is categorized as procedural or 7 substantive. Here, plaintiffs argue that the due process
8 violation is substantive in nature. Substantive due process 9 prohibits governmental interference with a person's 10 fundamental right to life, liberty, or property by 11 unreasonable or arbitrary legislation.

12 The Court concludes that there is no due process 13 violation. The Act does not deny those patients who want to 14 exercise their rights under the Act from any of the same 15 benefits that other patients receive. Nothing is denied to 16 them and nothing is mandated. The physician and patient are 17 free to not utilize the Act and are free to impose more 18 stringent requirements.

19 In addition, the procedure is one that requires the 20 physician to seek the advice of a consulting physician and 21 places numerous safeguards in the process before the lethal 22 drug is prescribed.

23 The Act provides that for an individual to qualify,
24 the individual must be competent, suffering from a terminal
25 illness, and voluntarily ask for the medication. The Act
26 prohibits requests made by others, even if they have a power 27 of attorney.

28 The Act includes second opinions, waiting periods,

1 medical record documentation, witnesses, counseling when 2 appropriate, and confirmation before the prescription is 3 written.

4 The phrase "terminal disease" under the Act is not 5 unconstitutionally vague because the Act defines terminal 6 disease as "an incurable and irreversible disease that has 7 been medically confirmed and will within reasonable medical 8 judgment result in death within six months."

9 The declarations of the doctors filed in support of 10 the preliminary injunction who have actually treated 11 terminally ill patients express a strong basis for their 12 refusal to participate in assisted suicide and multiple 13 reasons for not assisting suicide, and they are very 14 persuasive. But their declarations do not bear on the issue
15 here of whether the Act should be enforced. The declarations 16 support an argument that the legislature should not have 17 adopted the Act in the first instance and should repeal the 18 Act, but they are not related to the enforcement of the Act 19 now that it has been adopted.

20 Therefore, the Court concludes that plaintiffs have 21 failed to demonstrate that they have a probability of success
22 regarding their challenges to the constitutionality of the Act 23 either on procedural or substantive grounds.

24 With respect to the second part of the analysis, the 25 balancing of harms, here, plaintiffs are free to say and do 26 whatever they choose regarding assisted suicide and to 27 advocate to their patients their belief that assisted suicide
28 should be rejected for religious, ethical, moral, or other

1 reasons.

2 Plaintiffs' Hippocratic Oath is not violated by the 3 Act. Physicians are not compelled to assist terminally ill
4 patients. It is the terminally ill individuals who want to 5 end their lives for reasons personal to them that will be 6 harmed by the delay.

7 Preventing the enforcement of the Act would elevate 8 the interests of those without a terminal illness over those 9 with such an illness. To the extent such individuals 10 suffering from a terminal illness base their decisions to end
11 life on the pain they're suffering, an injunction would force 12 them to suffer additional pain.

13 Therefore, the Court concludes that the 14 balance-of-harm analysis favors enforcement of the Act. For 15 these reasons, the Court would deny the request for 16 preliminary injunction.

17 Mr. Larson.

18 MR. LARSON: Thank you, your Honor.

19 You know, it's clear that your Honor has read the 20 briefs and put time and you've written an opinion. I have 21 enough experience to know that the Court has made a decision.
22 But, as you pointed out at the outset, this is a matter of 23 life and death, and so I feel obligated to at least present 24 some argument, if not so much to change your mind today, your 25 Honor, to keep in mind as this case goes forward. This is the 26 beginning of a very long process. It's not the end, and 27 that's the first point that I would want to make. Whatever 28 decision your Honor ultimately makes today, you are going to 1 be establishing the status quo going forward.

2 For over 5,000 years, your Honor, based on cultural 3 values, moral values, and legal values, our society and the 4 societies of which the vast majority of Americans come from, 5 have treated life and end-of-life decisions in a certain way.
6 Suicide and assisting in suicide is something which has been 7 forbidden, whether it be legally, morally, culturally, by 8 whichever way.

9 That cultural norm, that moral norm, that legal 10 norm, is subject to some change, but there's a tremendous 11 presumption in doing that, and we need to be very careful and 12 make sure that that change is consistent with and conforms 13 with our Constitution, the State Constitution and the United 14 States Constitution.

15 We have brought what I believe is a very reasonable
16 and serious challenge to the constitutionality of this Act.
17 So if the Court is going to preserve anything for the duration 18 of this litigation, I respectfully submit that you should be 19 preserving the status quo as it has existed, as opposed to 20 something that was changed, even by the defendant's
21 recognition, by this extraordinary session. It was rejected
22 by a vote of the people of the State of California, rejected, 23 as I understand it, repeatedly by general sessions of the 24 legislature. This was, as even the L.A. Times editorial said 25 yesterday, it was -- it's how unpopular legislation gets 26 passed through or snuck through and passed to the people of 27 California. And I think that --

28 THE COURT: And the Court is disturbed by the way it

1 was passed.

2 MR. LARSON: Well, it should be disturbed. And I --
3 there's got to be a lot more argument. We have to develop the 4 record here. There is a case to be presented. But I'm just 5 suggesting here at the outset of this case, when this Court
6 has the very momentous decision of deciding what to preserve,
7 the status quo as it has existed or this Act that was passed
8 under questionable circumstances. So that's my first point, 9 your Honor.

10 My second point, I guess, has to do with the Court's 11 treatment of rational basis. We all remember -- there was a 12 reference to law school. We learned the three levels of 13 review and rational basis. In some court opinions, it almost 14 seems to become a joke. Anything can be a rational basis.

15 Other court opinions from the Supreme Court and 16 other courts have suggested there needs to be some meat there.
17 There's got to be something, not just in the purpose, but as 18 this Court just recognized a few moments ago, in the method of 19 achieving that purpose. It's not sufficient to state a 20 reason. Any lawyer can come up with a reason for something;
21 right? That's what we're paid to do.

22 But the Court also needs to carefully examine 23 whether the method adopted by the legislature is reasonably 24 related to achieving and furthering that purpose. And it's 25 this method, specifically the methods outlined in the Act, not 26 in the language of the Act so much as requiring this Court to 27 look below the language. And I want to give one example. And 28 I do appreciate that I'm on the bottom of the hill looking up

1 on this.

2 I was given something this morning. I provided a 3 copy to the defense counsel. It's a certified copy from the 4 County of Ventura of a death certificate. I'll put it on the 5 ELMO here, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

7 MR. LARSON: It's the death certificate of Mary
8 Elizabeth Davis, who many people have read about in the paper.
9 She was at least the first publicly reported, from our 10 perspective, victim of this. You know, reading those articles 11 are heart-wrenching. I suppose if every circumstance was as 12 well documented and had that much attention, you know, that 13 might be one case. That's not the case, sadly, for the vast 14 majority of people who are suffering from terminal illness.
15 That's a big part of our argument.

16 Something struck me in looking at this death 17 certificate. I'm going to put it on the ELMO here, your 18 Honor. It's the cause of death. We all know, anyone who's 19 read these newspapers -- and I'm not suggesting the Court to 20 take judicial notice of a newspaper article. But I think it's 21 pretty well understood that she committed suicide or she 22 ingested the disease [sic].

23 But if you look, your Honor, here, it describes the 24 cause of death as ALS. And there's a series of boxes checked
25 here on the far right, and they're all checked "No." I'm 26 going to try to zoom in if I can on that. And it's, you know, 27 was the death reported to the coroner? No. Was a biopsy 28 performed? No. Was an autopsy performed? No?

1 And this underscores the problem, your Honor. The 2 California Department of Public Health is given a directive to 3 physicians that they should not report the cause of death as 4 pursuant to the End of Life Option Act. In fact, what they're 5 being directed to do is pretend that the person didn't die 6 from what they actually died from, but from the underlying 7 terminal illness.

8 I remember reading "Animal Farm" in high school and 9 being struck by that book and thinking -- wondering kind of in 10 my life, would I even encounter that type of government -- 11 governmental doublespeak. This Act reeks of that "Animal 12 Farm" mentality.

13 We're going to pretend, your Honor, that this 14 person, and the hundreds or thousands of other people who are 15 going to be subjected to this, are not going to die from what 16 they died. We're going to change our government records to 17 reflect something else. Doctors are going to be told what 18 they can and cannot write on death certificates, not for 19 medical reasons, but for political reasons, and that should 20 scare and give pause to anybody.

21 The concern I have is not so much for a case as well 22 documented as this, but for the situation that is described by 23 our experts. When you have people trying to end prematurely 24 the life of an elderly relative, someone where there is 25 financial gain. I know this Court, I'm sure, has had 26 experience with the awful experience of going through probate
27 trials or contested trust trials and the nightmare that goes 28 on in those types of situations. When you interject this Act

1 into those circumstances, the opportunities for abuse, given
2 the language of this Act, given what -- I just can't describe 3 it any other way as the horrible standards.

4 Your Honor, in your order you refer to the 5 definition of "terminal illness" and the safeguards. What 6 we're trying to show through this case, your Honor, is that is 7 just language. It's like the language of "Animal Farm." It's 8 like the language of this death certificate. It doesn't 9 really mean what it says. It says a terminal illness. We 10 should think, well, gosh, if it's really terminal illness, why 11 shouldn't they have this right? But I think we demonstrated, 12 pretty convincingly, that the scientific consensus is nowhere 13 near certain that that is an appropriate definition of 14 "terminal illness." Maybe within two weeks of death that 15 decision can be made with a certain degree of scientific 16 certainty.

17 I mean, there's a lot of ridicule of those that 18 oppose the whole global warming and make a mockery of science.
19 Well, this Act makes a mockery of science, and it's that 20 mockery of science, it's the mockery of the reality, which we 21 believe is the disconnect in this method and the disconnect to 22 rationality, and that is what we are challenging.

23 Your Honor, it is -- the three points that I would 24 want to just underscore is the arbitrariness of this 25 definition of "terminal illness," the fact that it can be made 26 by any doctor, whether qualified or not to make that 27 definition, and the complete lacking of any scientific basis
28 to define "terminal illness" in those terms.

1 Keep in mind, this is terminal illness with or 2 without treatment. So the Type 1 diabetic theoretically can 3 be diagnosed as terminally ill because six months without 4 medication, he or she is going to die.

5 And I would like to say that, oh, we can just trust 6 the medical doctors to always do the right thing. And as we 7 said, somewhat sardonically -- I think Mr. Haskins deserves
8 the credit for this -- in one of our footnotes, three words, 9 "medical marijuana cards." We understand that that can't be 10 trusted, and we are very concerned about a whole cottage 11 industry of doctors, unfortunately, who will not.

12 You couple that with my second point, that the 13 doctors are immune from liability. This isn't just a 14 decreased standard of care, both the diagnosing and the 15 prescribing of these deadly medications is immune. And you
16 put those two things together with this amorphous, arbitrary
17 definition of "terminal illness," coupled with no
18 accountability for the definition, I just don't see how that 19 can be anything but arbitrary and capricious in terms of the 20 method.

21 And the final point, your Honor, there is no
22 safeguards regarding the ingestion of the drugs themselves, 23 and the nightmarish circumstances have been well documented by 24 the declarants attached to our motion for preliminary 25 injunction.

26 So those are my points, your Honor. I know that you 27 have a difficult decision to make, but I really submit that 28 the presumption should favor preserving the status quo as it

1 has always existed, preserving the safeguards. I mean, 2 it's -- the language that the Court uses seems to accept the 3 defendant's characterization of what we're trying to seek 4 here. What we're trying to avoid, your Honor, is the 5 abrogation. What we're trying to enjoin is the abrogation of 6 very important laws that have been enacted to protect the 7 elderly, to protect the terminally ill. That's what this is 8 doing. It's not so much providing a right to die as it is an 9 abrogation of the law. The actual effect, the most direct 10 effect of the law on the District Attorney, on the State of 11 California, is an abrogation of these protections. That's 12 what this Court is doing. And perhaps in Ms. Davis' case, 13 that's not so much the issue. But I can't think but that 14 we're going to have a pile of these death certificates with 15 all three of those boxes checked "No." It's a brave new 16 world.

17 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Larson.

18 Let me hear from Ms. Lynch.

19 MS. LYNCH: Yes, thank you, your Honor.

20 First of all, I need to address the status quo here.

21 THE COURT: Please speak into the microphone.

22 MS. LYNCH: As your Honor realizes and knows, in 23 California, we have a healthcare decision law, and that allows 24 an individual to withdraw or withhold medical treatment, life
25 sustaining medical treatment. That's the status quo. That's 26 the status quo in this country, that we are able to make these 27 life affirming -- we're allowed to have autonomy and respect, 28 and we're allowed to make these end-of-life decisions. The

1 Act is simply an extension of that.

2 The Act, as this Court also knows, it's been almost 3 a year since the legislature heard this. It was signed in 4 October and it's been in effect for three months. So the 5 status quo is really to give people choices, to give people 6 options.

7 This Act is completely voluntary. No person has 8 to -- no physician has to prescribe drugs, and-in-dying drugs.
9 No -- as the Court has pointed out, no doctor has to discuss 10 the subject. No individual has to avail themselves of the 11 law.

12 What counsel is really talking about here is just a 13 fear, a fear that our doctors are going to abandon their 14 professional responsibilities and their medical standards of 15 care, and that's just not true, your Honor.

16 And there are many, many safeguards in this Act that 17 the Court went over, and I'd like to go through a few of them
18 because -- and I would also like to -- before I go on that, we 19 talked a little bit about the Lee versus State of Oregon case.
20 I realize that is a federal case and it's a different 21 standing. But in that case, the court had an actual patient, 22 and they went through what would have to happen for this 23 person to ingest an aid-in-dying drug, contrary to their true 24 intent.

25 It's very similar to the law that we have in 26 California. It is very similar. The arguments that are being 27 presented by plaintiffs are similar to the arguments that were 28 presented to the legislature in this bill and the one

1 preceding bill, and that has been going on for the last 20
2 years. This just did not occur.

3 They looked at the safeguards. A person has to be 4 terminally ill. Let's talk about that. "Terminal illness" is 5 defined as incurable, irreversible, and it has to be medically
6 confirmed. "Medically confirmed" means treating physician -- 7 and this is not an ER doctor, this is a doctor that is 8 treating that patient. This is a person that is working 9 hand-in-glove with that patient, whether it is an oncologist
10 or whatever specialist it is. This is the person that knows 11 about this particular illness and has to counsel this 12 particular person. This is a specialist, for the most part, 13 in this area, deals with -- dealt with patients that have the 14 physical and the mental aspects of the disease.

15 Then you have the consulting physician, who is an 16 expert in the field, and he or she also reviews the medical 17 records and examines. If there is any, any indication of a 18 mental disorder, then they must go to a mental health 19 specialist, who has to be a psychiatrist or a psychologist.
20 Nobody will get a drug, an aid-in-dying drug, unless they have 21 mental capacity.

22 "Mental capacity" is defined as it is in the Probate
23 Code; you know the nature and extent of your illness, you
24 understand the ramifications of that, and you can communicate 25 with your doctor.

26 "Informed consent" means you understand the 27 diagnosis, you understand the prognosis, you understand what 28 you are -- the decision you are making. It requires that the

1 patient asks for the aid-in-dying drugs three times, two times
2 orally, 15 days apart, once in writing. When they do this in 3 writing, there are two witnesses there. That writing, that 4 form, which is in the Health and Safety Code, says "I am a 5 patient. I understand my prognosis. I understand my 6 diagnosis. I am of sound mind. I am not being coerced."

7 Then there are two additional witnesses, one of 8 which cannot be related by blood or marriage. That person
9 also attests and says, "I know you. I know this person. I 10 believe them to be of sound mind. I believe they are not 11 coerced."

12 There's also a provision where the doctor has to 13 talk to the patient outside of others to make sure there is no 14 coercion. There is also 48 hours before the medication is 15 even prescribed, the doctor has to, once again, make sure that 16 all of this -- the patient has mental capacity, informed 17 consent.

18 So there are many, many safeguards in the Act, and 19 these are the safeguards that were very, very important to the 20 legislature. When this was going on in the Capitol about a 21 year ago, there were so many hearings and testimony, and even 22 one of the plaintiff physicians testified. So this wasn't 23 just decided in extraordinary session. There was a session 24 before that. And, as the plaintiffs pointed out, there were 25 six -- I think six pieces of legislation that have gone 26 through over the last 20 years.

27 There are also two cases that I found very 28 instructive here because they span a period of almost 20 years

1 and goes back -- and it's the Donaldson case, your Honor, 2 1992. And in that case, the court -- let me give you the 3 cite. It is in the brief, but I'll give it. It's 4 2 Cal.App.4th 1614, point page 1623.

5 The Court says, "It is unfortunate for Donaldson 6 that courts cannot always accommodate the special needs of an 7 individual. We realize that time is critical to Donaldson, 8 but the legal and philosophical problems posed by his 9 predicament are a legislative matter rather than a judicial 10 one."

11 That was in 1992. Let's move forward to 2015, and 12 we have the Donorovich versus O'Donnell [sic] case at 241
13 Cal.App.4th 11118 [sic], and the point page is 1124, 1125.
14 "We agree with defendants that physician aid-in-dying and 15 attendant procedures and safeguards against abuse are matters 16 for the legislature."

17 And that's where I would like to end. It is clear 18 that the physicians, the plaintiffs, are morally and 19 personally opposed to this legislation and that they disagree
20 with the legislative policy. That is not a basis for this 21 Court to find this law unconstitutional. All deference goes 22 to the legislature in this regard, and it is not for this 23 Court, these plaintiffs, to question that.

24 MR. LARSON: Very briefly, if I might?

25 THE COURT: Do you wish to respond?

26 MR. LARSON: I'm sorry, your Honor, just very 27 briefly.

28 I think that what you just heard there, which was a

1 lot of almost ideologic or aspirational talk about what they 2 think the Act is going to do, is belied very readily by the 3 simple exhibit that I showed you in my statement.

4 She talked about this treating doctor who spent all 5 this time and knew the patient and knew the circumstances.
6 But even in Ms. Davis's case, I was struck by the fact that,
7 according to the death certificate, she suffered ALS for three 8 years. Yet look at the length of time that this Dr. Dial, who 9 signed the death certificate, was actually attending to her,
10 June 30, 2016, to her death date, July 24, 2016. Even in this 11 highly publicized case, less than a month, your Honor.

12 Where is the final attestation that you spoke about,
13 and what enforcement if it's never filled out? There is no 14 biopsy, there's no coroner, there's no autopsy. That's the 15 problem. The language, like the language in "Animal Farm," 16 sounds wonderful. It sounds all reassuring, and that's what 17 you heard.

18 I'm going to be standing before your Honor probably 19 with a stack of these in a few months. There's one right now.
20 We're asking you to enjoin this, to stop this, and make sure 21 that we have an opportunity to fully vet this with evidence.

22 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Larson.

23 Does the District Attorney's office wish to be 24 heard?

25 MS. FITZPATRICK: We join the AG, your Honor.

26 THE COURT: The Court reiterates once again that 27 this is a very difficult issue. It's emotionally charged. We 28 understand that. However, the Court is not going to change

1 its tentative ruling. The Court is going to deny the 2 injunction request at this time.

3 It looks like we have a case management conference
4 set for December 5th. I believe that's our next appearance.

5 MS. LYNCH: December 5th, your Honor?

6 THE COURT: Yes.

7 MS. LYNCH: 8:30.

8 THE COURT: That's at 8:30 in this department.

9 Thank you. Thank you, Counsel.

10 MR. LARSON: Thank you, your Honor.

11 MS. LYNCH: Thank you, your Honor.
